We examined whether polymorphisms in the COL8A1 gene, which has been reported to be associated with aortic aneurysms, are associated with congenital heart disease (CHD). The study population consisted of 430 CHD cases and 832 control subjects, all of Japanese origin. A total of 20 polymorphisms in the COL8A1 gene, from the 5' end of the promoter region to the 3' end of the 3' untranslated region, were examined by direct sequencing. The frequencies of polymorphisms in the 3' untranslated region were significantly higher in CHD cases than in control subjects. When these polymorphisms were grouped together according to allele type, the groups with a large number of alanine allele (A and B), alanine-serine-alanine-cysteine-proline-alanine (ASA), alanine-aspartate (AA), and alanine-proline (AP) showed a significantly higher risk of CHD (adjusted odds ratio (OR) 3.03-11.57, P=0.01-0.048). In addition, the ASA (A+T) group (11.54 (95% confidence interval (CI) 1.44-89.85), P=0.01) and AA (OR 1.91, 95% CI 1.02-3.62, P=0.04) groups also showed a significantly higher risk of CHD. Our results suggest that the associations of the COL8A1 gene with aortic aneurysms and cerebral aneurysms may be involved in the pathogenesis of heart disease.
